This weather is not admirably suited to the young children who have to wait at schooltestill it is seen good to let them in. Can any one fancy himself staying for five es unnecessarily exposed to the keen statement that Dr. Koch will decline the sooth of the wind yesterday morning or the chilly air and flying snow of this !

These are days in which the children suffor. It must be easy enough for any one to appreciate what waiting at the school gates work by having a good bank account to ans for the poor boys and girls when this sort of day is upon us. Yet with the knowledge that this uncomfortable weather would be along very soon, the School Commissioners have calmly postponed two or three times the discussion and settlement of this question.

It should need little deliberation, and there should be only one solution possible. Open the gates and let them in. How can it is hard for him to forego all complaint, any one doubt that this is what should be Moaning does not help it, but rating the done when the miserably biting weather of beastly weather is relieving to the aggrato-day brings so forcibly to the mind what vated soul, and is perfectly excusable. #### WHO WAS THE MISCREAMT?

Mr. PATRICK NAPOLEON OAKLEY IS BY Alderman whose voice is often heard in the councils of the City Fathers. He is a man of such sensitive integrity that even a reflection of the shadowiest kind burns him like a wasp sting. And yet some casehardened miscreant hro offered to bribe him. Mr. OAKLEY made his startling revelation at the Aldermanic meeting yesterday when the East River Tunnel project was brought up. He said that bribes had been offered him to favor it. When asked who the briber was he would not tell. His brother Aldermen are inclined to doubt that any one could be so brazen as to "approach" Mr. OAKLEY with any wicked scheme. They think that if one did he must now be dead or in a hospital, which may account for Mr. OAKLEY's subsequent reticence.

THE END OF COLUMBUS.

It seems a melancholy thing that the sole surviving lineal descendant of Christo PHER COLUMBUS should be dying as the is about to celebrate the event with the Duke of VERAGUA, a Spanish grandee, is sick unto death, and in him the line of COLUMBUS ends.

He has had prominent positions in the Government. He was Minister of the Interior in a former Cabinet and is President of the Columbus Association. Another distinction, in the eyes of his countrymen, at least, is that the Duke bred the best fighting bulls of any one in the Kingdom.

Why could be not survive to witness th glory given to the great Discoverer, his ancestor, by this land!

CHRISTMAS-TREE WEATHER.

The more wintry the weather the brighter seems the warmth and jollity of Christmas time. Keen, cold air, whirling snow and ice are the fittest setting for this mid-Winter jewel. The contrast of cheerful fires, warm rooms and rippling mirthfulness with uncomfortable conditions of weather outside the house belps to make the former all the more attractive. This touch of Winter should quicken the interest in THE EVENING WORLD's Christmas Tree for poor children. They depend for this solitary vivid pleasure in their Winter on you. If you have beart which can warm sympathetically over misfortune, it should be kindled by the picture of these little pensioners on your charity. Contribute something to the Tree

Heigh ho and merrily oh! Jolly Jack

Frost is in town. Your cheeks are like a rose and you've a poppy for a nose. And there's something else that's new and quite true. St. Nick has an office and sn agent in the Pulitzer Building. Just at present there isn't anything in the Christmas quarters but a small bank, a big desk, a flood of sunshine and a very wide-awake gentleman by the kindling name of Wood. Manager Wood received his commission about a week ago, but last evening a special messenger arrived in the Tower with an messenger arrived in the Tower with an official document, scaled with hollyberry and stamped with the monogram of the king of all scasons. It was a very lengthy communication, of a purely personal character, filled with suggestions and signed "Merrily yours, S. C." More than that Agent Wood refused to divulge.

However, the wood refused to divulge. official document, sealed with hollyberry and stamped with the monogram of the king of all sensons. It was a very lengthy communication, of a purely personal character, filled with suggestions and signed

However, this much is certain. THE EVENING WORLD Christmas Tree Fund amounts to nearly $400, and Mr. Wood, as a commissioned officer in the service of which each of the works given will be per- Kris Kringle, has pledged himself to make a tremendous success of the affair. His letters and credentials will give him an oper sesame to every toy factory, candy house and clothing store in New York City. He has the entire staff of THE EVENING WORLD at his command, and the freedom of its columns for ventilating his ideas and making his wishes known.

Hard workers as a rule are not great talkers, and just at present it is impossible to say what plan he intends to adopt. In all probability he will rent five or six publie halls, order a huge tree for each and send a committee of ladies and a van of gifts to dress them. Cards of invitation of the girls, watte the other maintained that it will be issued to every boy and girl in and personal visit from S. A ream of note-paper has been sent to the St. Nicholas Department, and a couple of messenger boys bired to post and fill orders One of these Mercuries is very, very small. Yesterday, while leaving the Tower, he dropped his list, and guess what it contained? An order for 2,000 bronze greet trumpets and 2,000 false faces.

"My stars!" I said to myself, "what racket, what grinning, what revelry and what fun 2,000 boys will have Christma morning with the trumpets in their mouth and their faces masked !" People with sensitive ears will need supply of cotton, that's certain. I hear, too, that a lady who lives in the Gerlach has promised to pay for an express wagon full of oranges, n do you suppose will cover them by way o keeping Jack Frost off? More than fou bundred pairs of woollen mittens.

I hear, too, that Agent Wood is a great financier. He does not think money is the root of evil. On the contrary, he is in clined to look upon it as a very great bless ing and the source of incalculable happiness. In his opinion love makes the world move, and money makes it merry. lie thinks, too, that if the children
